10th International Mohammed VI Cup Rabat 2014

Rabat, the political and administrative capital of the Kingdom of Morocco, with its colonial architecture and its palm-lined boulevards, it wants a tourist destination. The atmosphere is as cosmopolitan as Casablanca its economic big brother down the coast but the quiet medina has an authentic feel to it, some good shops and fascinating architecture. You'll be blissfully ignored on the streets and souks, so it's easy to discover the city's monuments and hidden corners at your own pace.

The picturesque Kasbah, with its narrow alleys, art galleries and magnificent ocean views, is also worth exploring. Rabat has a long and rich history, and plenty of monuments to show for it from the Phoenician, Roman, Almohad and Merenid times. The Bou Regreg River between Rabat and Salé, this whitewashed town across, where time appears to have stood still. is also a good place to eat; there are plenty of wonderful restaurants around, and you can enjoy the sunset.
